Principal's Pen

I am often guilty of doing activities I like to do rather than activities I ought to do -- procrastination. I work really hard -- but, do not accomplish what needs to get done. However, there's a way to do both...

More than one hundred years ago, a man named Ivy Lee went to the president of Bethlehem Steel, Charles Schwab, and made a deal with him. He said he could increase Schwab's productivity as well as the workload of all his managers. What's more, Lee told Schwab he could help his executives produce a significant amount more if he could just spend fifteen minutes with each of them. To make the offer especially enticing, Lee told Schwab he wouldn't charge anything at all unless his advice worked. "Then, after three months," Lee told Schwab, "if my advice proves profitable, send me a check for whatever you think it's worth."

They struck a deal.

Here's how productive he was—Lee actually spent only ten minutes with each executive. Here's what he told them: "I want you to promise that for the next ninety days, before leaving your office at the end of each day, you'll make a list of the six most important things you have to do the next day and number them in their order of importance." The executives were shocked that that was all they were asked to do. "That's it," Lee said. "Scratch off each item after you finish it. Then go on to the next item on your list. If something doesn't get done, put it on the following day's list."

Each Bethlehem executive agreed to follow Lee's instructions. Three months later, Schwab studied the results. He was so pleased, he sent Lee a check for $35,000! (That may or may not seem like a lot of money to you, but this was one hundred years ago. At the time, the average United States worker made $2.00 a day or $4,000 a year. Thirty-five thousand dollars was a LOT of money! Even today, imagine if you spent a few minutes with a group of executives and gave each one the same, simple tip and got $35,000 for it. You'd be thrilled!)

If it worked for them, maybe it could work for you and me.

He will be in his classroom from 9-11:00 every Saturday morning, to help any 5th or 6th grade students with lessons as well as give them an opportunity to make up any missed homework or class work. There will be a Cheerios break at 10:00, and I-Pad free time will be from 10:15-11:00. Mr. Reilly reminds parents that he distributes a grade sheet every Friday, and to drive their child to 'Extra Help Saturdays,' if they feel their child's grades are not satisfactory.
