

AIRWAVES

December 1, 2009

Hello All:

Here is a quick update from your radio station:

- The SIP and AP satellite dish installations are near complete. Ron Zastrow from Alaska Public Broadcasting in Anchorage and Dave Herron with the Associated Press in Seattle are both in Sand Point working to complete the project. The AP satellite dish should be operational tomorrow and the SIP dish later this week. The AP satellite dish will feed text directly into the production room computer. The SIP dish will enable the radio station to receive statewide broadcasts, including news programs to which it regularly contributes.

- Chuck Lakaytis of Alaska Public Broadcasting visited King Cove to review the translator (FM radio station) situation. The translator as you know is off the air. Chuck is putting together his report with his recommendations. We hope to have his report in the very near future.

- The radio station has a pizza sale going on right now at Cut 'R Loose Coffee in Sand Point. The pizza materials are being supplied by the Moose's Tooth Restaurant in Anchorage. The purchase of a twenty five dollar ticket entitles you to one large pizza on Sunday, December 6, 2009. The pizzas will be baked at the Sand Point School. The sale is limited to fifty pizzas, nine of which are sold.

- Wells Fargo renewed its underwriting support and Aleutian Financial has promised to become an underwriter at the same level. Wells Fargo contributed $750.00 to the radio station.

- Keep your fingers crossed as we will be in receipt of the decision on our Round V Capital Grant application soon. The station's grant application sought financial support for upgrades to studio recording equipment, purchase of additional furniture to complete the production room and the rewiring of the station's computer network.

The next Board meeting will take place early next week.

Best,
